Jesse Hunter

Mr. Fast

Web app

10/18/19-

Project description

       In this project we are going to write a story but go through multiple different versions in it as in different decisions and their outcomes, this means we need to think ahead and plan the story frame out before we write out the story, and we need to find ways we can connect the story branches and make all the decisions count and lead into three main endings that we can get from any starting point, So it needs to rely more on decisions in the middle of the story.

       Along with the story we are going to have to make the website with buttons and everything to make this work. The program we will be making is gonna let the reader navigate through the stories and prompt them with buttons on the website to make decisions and read that decision with what the next part of the story is.